

An Introductory Offer

I wanted to personally follow up with you in regards to the forum you attended a couple of months back. We have received a large number of inquiries lately on how companies can get involved with our technology and what type of investment it would require to get started with what the industry is describing as 100% secure key management technology. This future proof technology is available today for you to start preparing yourself for the next generation of security products.

We at MagiQ Technologies have put together a packaged system that includes everything you will need to get started in this leading edge, future proof technology.

The system price includes and Alice and Bob system, that allows you to connect two sites over a fiber network and a one year annual support contract. The system price is $78,400 U.S. dollars. In addition, we offer an optional one week on-site training course that involves the total understanding of our system as well as in-depth education on advanced Quantum technologies and how they apply to the future of networking. This one week on-site program is $11,500 U.S. dollars plus travel and expenses.

We have a limited number of systems available at this offering price. If you would like to further discuss the system or procure a system to get a jump on the security market place, please contact me either by e-mail or you can call my office number listed below..

Our web-site, at www.magiqtech.com has a great deal of information on our products. I look forward to the possibility of working with you in the future.

Best regards,

Kevin
